

CHILD LABOR LAW MAY CAUSE FIGHT

Bitter Factional Fight Looms Over Johnson's Proposition

EFFECTS STATE RIGHTS

Would Start Flood of Amendments to Constitution, Opponents Claim

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The proposed amendment to article 19 of the American constitution today threatened to precipitate one of the bitterest factional fights in the history of the senate.

North Versus South Again.

It was north against south and east against west in a new fight over the basic principles of government as implied by the proposed amendment of Senator Hiram W. Johnson, republican of California, for prohibiting exploitation of child labor.

Johnson warmly defended the legislation as necessary to protect children. He charged it was the duty of the national government to "slightly invade state rights" when the issue of child welfare was raised.

Bitter condemnation came from Senator Lee S. Overman, democrat of North Carolina, who branded the proposed amendment as a clear "attempt to wipe out state lines."

From the opposing faction it was contended that the Johnson amendment would open the door to scores of similar amendments which ultimately would establish a paternalistic superstructure of federal government. It was pointed out that similar provisions could be added to the Johnson amendment which would give congress authority on public educational matters and finally to usurp police powers of the various states.

Court Not Effective.

"It is true my proposed amendment to the constitution would effect the rights of states," said Johnson, "but it is unfortunately equally true that the object sought, salutary and necessary as it is, cannot be attained apparently under the decisions of the supreme court in any other way."

"Ordinarily, I would not wish to invade the prerogatives of the state, but the welfare of little children required it, I would not for an instant hesitate."

The 16th article of the constitution reads:

"Section 1. The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people."

Johnson's amendment would add the provision:

"Provided, however, that the congress shall have power to regulate or prohibit throughout the United States employment of children under 18 years of age."

KENDALL PUPILS MAKE IDEAL HOME

Miniature House Displayed Down Town Attracts Much Interest

Tom Thumb and his wife could find no more ideal home than the model house constructed from first floor to roof by pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of Kendall school and now on exhibit in the window of the Abbott & Welch real estate offices, 315 South Boulder.

Firm and solid enough to withstand weather, the little bungalow beckons invitingly to home-lovers. A wide porch promises comfort and coolness, within is a living room attractive as to furnishing and warm-rose in decorative scheme, and then a dining room where the hearth fire's glow falls on pleasing furniture, and next a white and fresh-looking bedroom. The house is painted yellow and the roof, with its 6,500 shingles nailed separately by hand, is a cool green.

The boys were the house-builders and the girls did the furnishing. Boy builders were: Clarence Small, Hugh Mossmann, Ray Howe, Willie Chislar, Ralph Miesick, Fred Chambers, Donald Bailey, John Harli, James Gilbert, A. C. Wise, Andrew Rogers, Vernon Grubbs, Bertie Sherill, Merle Gurrier, Walter Ahrens, Earl Catron, Alexander Turnbull, Thomas Hamilton, Carl McConnell, Prentice Sewell, Charles Riggs, Claude McKinney, Joe Evans, John McClarin, Charles Duncan, George Walker, Clifford Bailey, Elsie Shipman, John Farris, William Bond, Holland Turner, George Styles, John Stephens, Franklin Blake, Bradford Thomas, Roy Stinson, Frank and Willie Schufar. The instructor was M. F. Reegan.

SAYS SEWERAGE RUINED DAIRY

Collinsville Defendant in Damage Suit for $20,000

The city of Collinsville was made defendant in a suit filed in district court Saturday for damages aggregating $20,000, by Gertrude Brickley, proprietor of the North Lane dairy.

In the petition the plaintiff alleges that she was forced to close her dairy by the state health department due to the use of a stream known as First creek which flows through the dairy farm, being polluted by the city's sewerage.

Prior to the use of the creek in this way, the petition avers that the water in the stream was used as a water supply source and was the dairy's only water supply. On September 18, 1915, the city manager and board of commissioners, the petition avers, had constructed a "septic tank through and into which all sewer refuse from said city was and is still being emptied and discharged," and that the "septic tank is located on the banks of the above mentioned First creek at a point adjacent to and in close proximity to this plaintiff's property line," and falling to function the sewer refuse has emptied into the creek polluting "the water of said stream until it is a putrid mass and has clogged said stream until the flow of water is and has been practically stopped."

Because the defendant and defendant used by the city to dispose of the sewerage has not done so, the petition alleges that the property has become unfit for habitation and unfit for any purpose and has made the stream germ infected and a source of disease forcing the state department of health to close the dairy on January 1, of this year.

Of the total sum of damages asked, $12,000 is for the value of the land and the remaining $8,000 for damages resulting from the loss of business. W. B. Richards, is attorney representing the plaintiff.

MONSTER PARADE ON MEMORIAL DAY

Combined Civic Committee Formulates Plans for Day's Observance

Tulsa will do honor to her soldier dead of the past three wars on Memorial day with a monster parade which, extending blocks long, will wind its slow way out from the pulsing, vibrating heart of the city to that little city of the dead, Rosehill cemetery, where floral wreaths of honor will be placed on the veterans graves and, yet more appropriate, replicas of the flag for which they fought and died.

Such is the plan for Tulsa's 1922 observance of Memorial day as formulated by the combined civic committee. In the parade are to march legionnaires and ex-service men and national guardsmen, women members of the auxiliaries to Joe Carson post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Rainbow organization, representatives of the American Red Cross, boy scouts and public school children. The field marshal for the day is to be a private, Ted White, who has named as his assistants two high officers, Col. Ira L. Reeves and Col. F. J. Hurley.

Gen. "Patsy" O'Neill, veteran of two wars and during the World war in charge of the Nineteenth division, will speak at the exercises in the cemetery. Public school children will place the floral decorations and boy scouts the flag decorations.

T. C. Hopkins, chairman of the general committee, has called a meeting of the committee for 7 o'clock Thursday evening in the Municipal auditorium.
